

- 1 Bull Run
With headwaters in the Bull Run Mountains to the west, Bull Run drops 1,280 feet through the Piedmont Plateau to the coastal plain of the Potomac River.
- 2 Island Ford
Soils and silt upstream have been deposited in the stream channel over time, shifting the course of Bull Run and connecting the island to the shoreline.
- 3 Bull Run-Occoquan Trail
This 18-mile trail follows Bull Run to the Occoquan Reservoir through a 5,000-acre greenway.
- 4 Cub Run
Reclaimed wastewater from U.O.S.A. enters lower Cub Run as it flows to Bull Run on its way to the Occoquan Reservoir and beyond.
- 5 Fairfax Rod & Gun Club
Shots may be heard above Bull Run from this recreational shooting club near Buckhall Branch.
- 6 Hemlock Trees
Abundant in northern woods or mountain areas, these evergreen trees find a home on shaded elevations and rocky ledges above the cool waters of Bull Run.
- 7 Occoquan Creek & River
400 streams drain into this tributary before falling to the Potomac River. Once evident, the river channels are now submerged below the waters of the reservoir.
- 8 Fall Line
One of many waterfalls separating Virginia's Piedmont Plateau from its Coastal Plain, the Occoquan once dropped 72 feet through a rocky 1 1/2 mile gorge.
- 9 Conrad Island
Recently created from dredged soils, this private property is a favorite spot for fishing birds including Cormorants, Ospreys and Eagles.
- 10 Belmont Bay
Under 8,000 years old, Belmont Bay is a relatively new natural feature. Evidence of 2,000-3,000 year old sites suggests American Indians once lived here.
- 11 Kane's Creek
A tidal inlet to Mason Neck State Park, the creek provides a view of a marsh ecosystem and resident and migrating waterfowl, raptors and herons.
- 12 Occoquan Bay
The Potomac River Wildlife Refuge Complex-Occoquan Bay, Mason Neck and Featherstone National Wildlife Refuges-all provide habitat crucial to wildlife.
Boat access is prohibited on Refuge lands.
- 13 Great Marsh
Within Mason Neck National Wildlife Refuge, this 285-acre freshwater marsh is the largest in northern Virginia and home to the American Bald Eagle.
Boat access is prohibited on Refuge lands.
- 14 Potomac River
The 413-mile Potomac River is the 4th largest river on the Atlantic Coast and a major tributary of the Chesapeake Bay.
- 15 Pohick Creek
Stretching 13 miles, it is one of the longest creeks and largest watersheds leading to the Potomac River.
